God in heaven, I cried, in tones of anguish. Kill me at once, but do not ask me to choose. It is one against many, yet what are they to me? Better that a score should perish swiftly, unexpectedly, than that one man should suffer such tortures in anticipation of a fate like mine. I tried to raise the lever but my heart failed me. I thought of my approaching marriage with Adelaide, the fruition of my life-long dreams--yet I could not force myself to throw it I thought of you, dear Louis, and of the many plans we had often discussed for the future--still I could not raise it. I thought of my recent discoveries in bacteriological science--secret, because not yet fully developed--which must perish with me, but I could not throw that lever. I could not...
