GAO assessed the decisions of Lowry Air Force Base (AFB), Columbus AFB, and the Navy to contract for aircraft maintenance services, focusing on: (1) projected cost savings; (2) the potential impact on personnel and equipment readiness; (3) the economic impact on the affected communities; (4) the impact on wartime mobilization requirements and personnel rotation schedules; and (5) other impacts on base functions. GAO found that: (1) Lowry AFB would realize its projected savings of 3.4 million; (2) the Navy, which consolidated several air stations aircraft maintenance requirements under two contracts, would realize most of its projected savings of 52.6 million; (3) Columbus AFB probably would not realize its projected savings of 4.2 million due to unsatisfactory contractor performance, and could incur additional costs in excess of those initially estimated for in-house maintenance; (4) most civilians obtained other government employment, and military personnel transferred, retired, or left the service; (5) both the Navy and the Air Force reported a minimal economic impact on the affected communities; (6) both the Navy and the Air Force reported no impacts on mobilization...

Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
