Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Some Indian Conceptions of Music The slender outline of the Indian musical system which is given in the following pages might be used as a guide through the intricacies of existing treatises on the subject. The student finds in these much that is contradictory in seeming, and confusing in nomenclature; but I venture to believe that the principles so briefly stated in this paper are, on the contrary, common to the whole of Indian musical art, although the terms employed are sometimes of the North, and sometimes of the South. What we have to remember in our study of Indian music - as, indeed, of any worthy subject - is that it is the fact that matters, not the name by which the fact is called, or the convention by which it may be concealed. Thus, for instance, the apparent difference between the system of melas in the South and that of ragas in the North ceases to be a question of essential import when we see that the mela is only raga resolved into its component tones for purposes of classification and analysis, and that Northern and Southern ragas are equally susceptible to such resolution. Or again, the much-disputed question as to the number of srutis (microtones) becomes to us a matter of entire indifference when we realise that Natural or Just Intonation is common to all Aryan peoples, and that the number of microtonal shades which can be added to septenary scales depends not upon a fixed law of the theorist, but upon the capacity of the individual musician to hear and reproduce them. As for the standard by which we can determine...
