In respect of the decomposition of nitrates in the soil, Schlosing¹ has shown that in sealed vessels certain soils emit a gas composed of carbonic dioxide and nitrogen. Deherain and Maquenne² confirm the observation of Schlosing, and seek further to discover the origin of the free nitrogen. A soil rich in organic matter gives rise to free nitrogen, while one poor in it does not. In addition to free nitrogen, nitrous oxide was also detected. The authors also confirm the observations of Gayon and Dupetit above cited, that heat and chloroform sterilize an earth containing nitrates, and prevent the action of the denitrifying ferment. When, however, a soil thus sterilized by heat is reseeded with a portion of denitrifying earth, it regains its original power. In further experiments, they show that the active cause of the phenomenon of denitrification is probably the butyric ferment described by Von Tiegham under the name of Bacillus amylobcaler. 2. Ammonia. The existence of ammonia in the air is a well-established fact; and even without the aid of rain it is possible that some of this substance may be absorbed by the soil and undergo nitrification. It is equally true that the soil also gives up ammonia sometimes to the air, and thus it is hard to determine whether, upon the whole, there...
