We frequently find the subject derived from a collection of stories from old Chinese history read in the Japanese schools; still more often it is their own history, and especially stories of the heroes and warriors of the Middle Ages, that are illustrated. Not to be separated from either of these divisions by a sharp line, we have a class of mythological subjects; or, finally, the motif is taken from everyday life--humorous renderings of types of man and beast to be seen daily in the streets or fields. In comparing the various collections here exhibited it will be seen that the same subject is frequently repeated, --two or more Netsukes appear at first sight identical; but a closer examination always shows minor variations in attitude or arrangement of dress, proving that though the carver may have treated his...
